net lite, coupled with the ready availability of cheap vocka. When Mr B. V. Petrovsky, the Soviet Minister of Health, visited Geneva, he even admitted to a closed session of Soviet officials at WHO that if alcoholism continued to spread at its present rate in Russia, it would eventually lead to the degeneration, of the nation.

Whereas in the past, says M. Dzhirkvelov, ordinary Russians complained privately sians complained privately about economic decay and political repression, nowadays more and more-members of the more and more members of the ruling elite itself are voicing their concern. These, he says, include officers of both the Army and the KGB, "which after; all are composed of people, many of whom understand what is going on only too well." Only the pinnacle of power is totally isolated from reality. reality:
"It is not surprising if Mr "It is not surprising if Mr Brezhnev and his colleagues believe in the abundance of Communist society, since they live in it, even if nobody else does. So, will some new leader ship take the radical rational measures." Mr. Dzhirkvelov believes necessary, including a degree of democratization? Mr. Dzhirkvelov himself is not optimistic. If the Kremlin tightens up still further, he says, something could well crack; but if it allows liberalization, that too would lead to an "unthat too would lead to an "unreaction would lead to an "unpredictable, explosion". Many Russians, he says, are fear-fully, asking themselves, what will happen next. The one certainty, Mr. Dzhirkvelov concludes, "Is that something must happen. We cannot go on as we are for much longer. © Times Newspapers Limited, 1980
